I am pleased to present AVİM 2015 Annual Report, where you may find information about AVİM’s activities and publications in 2015.

2015 has been an interesting and active year for the Eurasian region. The situation in Crimea and Eastern Ukraine continues to raise concerns about a new era of strained relations between the West and the Russian Federation, augmented with the crisis in Syria. The Russia-led Eurasian Economic Union that came into force on 1 January 2015 causes question marks about the emerging geopolitical context and the possibility of a renewed competitive regionalism. Meanwhile, the China-led New Silk Road Project that gained more in content in 2015 is perceived as a remarkable initiative that may facilitate dramatic geopolitical transformations. The Iran-P5+1 Nuclear Deal is likely to result in significant changes and to lead global players review their strategic calculations. Certainly, the turmoil in the Arab World has had its echo in Eurasia.

These developments indicate that the Eurasian region is likely to evolve and shift to the center of gravity of the world geopolitics in the coming decades.

This apparent trend brings about significant opportunities for the Eurasian countries and Turkey. On the other hand, in order to benefit from the newly emerging geopolitical context, these countries need to overcome various issues that hinder their development and security, and, as a consequence, the progress of the region as a whole. Overcoming these issues is the crucial challenge that awaits the policy makers of these countries.

As AVİM, we have sought to analyze these developments to facilitate analytical and realistic assessments of the developments in the Eurasian region and to share our findings with the academic and policy-making circles and the wider interested public.

Overall, within this emerging geopolitical context in 2015, we have continued our activities and publications in an amplified manner, which can be attested by referring to the increase in the number of national and international events that AVİM organized, enriched content and scope of its publications and the field research that our experts carried out. In 2015, the second edition of Armenian Diaspora: Diaspora, State, and the Imagination of the Republic of Armenia by AVİM’s expert Dr. Turgut Kerem Tuncel was published. The 50th, 51st, and 52nd issues of Ermeni Araştırmaları, 31st and 32nd issues of Review of Armenian Studies (in English) and the 15th issue of International Crimes and History / Uluslararası Suçlar ve Tarih (bilingual in English and Turkish) were also released. Eight conference books and one report were also published in 2015. In addition to these, we have continued publishing commentaries and policy analyses on our website and have continued in distributing a daily bulletin via email.

Among the politically significant developments and events in 2015, the events, publications and discussions dedicated to the centenary of the 1915 have had a significant weight. For this reason, a great portion of our activities were dedicated to the analyses of the events related to the centenary of 1915.

It is gratifying to observe that AVİM’s activities and publications are met with the attention of academic and policy-making circles. This encourages us to keep ourselves in track.

In the following pages, please find detailed information about AVİM’s activities and publications in 2015.

I would like to extend our gratitude to everyone who have shown interest in our work and who have supported us.
Today, advances in technology have brought about an increased flow of information and with it a need for the categorization and interpretation of that information so as to present it to the wider public. To serve this purpose, specialized scientific institutions were founded which share information and commentaries with the media as well as the public, and even with the official bodies.

Although think-tanks in Turkey began to emerge in the 1970s, it took a relatively long time for these institutions to make headway, and it was not until the 2000s that their number and efficacy started to increase. Amongst them is the Center for Eurasian Strategic Studies (ASAM), established at the end of the 1990s in Ankara, made a significant progress in a short span of time, brought some fifty researchers and scholars in its staff and published numerous books and journals.
The Armenian Question was brought into the forefront of Turkey’s agenda in the face of several developments. The attempts of Robert Kocharyan, who was elected as President in 1998 to include the matter of the recognition of the 1915 events as genocide by the international community in the government program, the increased efforts of the Armenian lobby in the United States to bring the mentioned genocide claims to the attention of the United States Congress, and the tendency which emerged in EU member states towards Turkey, which has attained the ‘candidate status’, to accept these claims and the decisions taken by the member states’ parliaments on the subject of genocide have contributed to an increased attention to the Armenian Question in Turkey.

Turkey’s attempts to prevent these efforts through diplomacy were met with a gap in the literature in Turkey regarding the historical and legal dimensions of the Armenian Question. In this regard, to carry out research on this subject, Institute for Armenian Research (ERAREN) was established on our behalf in the late-2000s under ASAM. As of 2001, ERAREN, which was composed of scholars, most of whom have earned the title of professor in the later years, began publishing two journals, namely the Armenian Studies, which is issued four times a year, and the Review of Armenian Studies which is issued twice a year. On the other hand, with the intention of bringing together writers and scholars in Turkey who work on the Armenian Question and to compare and contrast their studies, in the years 2002 and 2004, two big meetings, under the name of Armenian Studies Turkish Congress, were organized with the participation of more than one hundred scholars and writers. In addition, in 2005, ERAREN started publishing the journal International Crimes and History, particularly to shed light on the Turkish and Muslim communities who were deported from the Balkans and Caucasus to the Ottoman Empire in the 19th century.

In the past 15 years, Armenian Studies and Review of Armenian Studies have been published on a regular basis. In this timeframe, 52 issues of Armenian Studies, comprising of 380 articles and 10,628 pages, and 5,162 pages of The Review of Armenian Studies with 199 articles in 32 issues have been published. As such, by exceeding 15,000 pages, the two journals make up the most substantial body of work concerning the Armenian Question and Turkey-Armenia relations in Turkey.

Following the closure of ASAM after ten years of extensive work, ERAREN resumed its activities under the auspices of the Turkmeneili Cooperation and Cultural Foundation based in Ankara in response to the requests expressed by different segments in Turkey. To replace the Institute, on 2 January, 2009, Center for Eurasian Studies (AVİM) was established under our presidency and took over the responsibilities of ERAREN. In addition to this, AVİM also assumed the task of carrying out research on Eurasia, a highly significant region for Turkey.

In 2015, the Armenian Question and the genocide claims were once again brought to the world’s attention by means of large-scale memorial services in Armenia and the diaspora for the 100\textsuperscript{th} anniversary of the resettlement of the Armenians. Consequently, there has been an increase in the studies on this matter undertaken by AVİM. In connection to this, in 2015, AVİM published the 50\textsuperscript{th}, 51\textsuperscript{st} and 52\textsuperscript{nd} issues of Armenian Studies one of which was a special issue entitled the 100\textsuperscript{th} Anniversary of the Resettlement of the Armenians. Likewise, the 31\textsuperscript{st} and 32\textsuperscript{nd} issues of Review of Armenian Studies were published, one of which was dedicated to the “100th Anniversary”. In addition to these, AVİM scholars made numerous publications on the AVİM Daily Bulletin and the website on issues related to the Armenian Question and Armenian relations.

Besides these, in 2015, AVİM held 10 meetings on the subjects of the Armenian Question and Turkey-Armenia relations. Two of these meetings were international meetings. Our research reveals that AVİM has held the largest number of meetings related to these topics in 2015 in Turkey. A conference book has been published for each meeting that includes the conference proceedings.

Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç became the director of AVİM in 2013. Even though studies on the Armenian Question carried on at full speed after this date, AVİM began making an effort to put more emphasis on studies concerning Eurasia, the region that encompasses all of Turkey’s neighbors, except for the Middle East, including the Black Sea, the Caspian region, Caucasus, and the Central Asian Turkic Republics that has great significance for Turkey’s security and economic relations.

In 2015, AVİM organized six meetings, one of which was international and two on issues relating to Caucasus. The speeches and presentations delivered at the meetings have been compiled and published as conference books.

AVİM intends to work more closely on Eurasia and organize events related to this region in the coming days.

AVİM, just like ERAREN, embraces objectivity and honesty in its studies and strives to maintain a scientific approach above every-day politics, to train specialists, and to make academic and scholarly contribution to Turkey’s interests in the international arena. AVİM will henceforth continue its activities in line with these principles.

I extend my warmest compliments to the President of AVİM, Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç, and the young researchers and scholars for their hard work and express my confidence in the success of their future studies.
On 5-6 January 2015, AVİM Honorary Chairman Ambassador (R) Ömer Engin Lütem made a presentation at Turkish-Armenian Relations in the 19th-20th Century: Resentments, Disappointments and the Search for New Ways to Reconcile Symposium (19-20.yy.da Türk-Ermeni ilişkileri Kaynaşma - Kırgınlık - Ayrılık - Yeni Arayışlar Sempozyumu) coordinated by İstanbul University Faculty of Letters, İstanbul Metropolitan Municipality, Institute of Turkish Revolution History, and İstanbul Branch of the Turkish Hearths.
The Symposium continued for three days with the participation of 74 scholars from Turkey, the United States, Azerbaijan, Poland and Russia who discussed Turkish-Armenian relations and exchanged views on possible steps which can be taken in the future on this subject.
Meeting with Center for Public Debate based in the Netherlands

On 23 January 2015, AVİM held a meeting with Center for Public Debate (CPD) based in the Netherlands.

The CPD is an organization which aims to facilitate objective public debate on matters involving the Turkish community in the Netherlands and thus contribute to the friendly relations among different communities. In line with this, at the meeting between AVİM and CPD, the parties engaged in discussions on genocide claims upheld by the Armenian community in the Netherlands as well as various issues which are of relevance to the Turkish community in this country, and initiatives which can be taken in the face of these developments.
The meeting, moderated by the Honorary Chairman of AVİM Ambassador (R) Ömer Engin Lütem, was attended by Prof. Dr. Sadi Çaycı (faculty member at the Department of Law at Başkent University), researcher Şükrü Server Aya, and the Director of AVİM Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç. At the meeting, the speakers discussed the matters raised by the Grand Chamber of the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) with regards to the January 2008 Perinçek-Switzerland Hearing and assessed the contemporary Turkish-Armenian relations and the legal and historical dimensions of the events of 1915.

In 2005, Doğu Perinçek spoke against the labelling of the 1915 events as genocide and described genocide claims as ‘an imperialist lie’ in a number of speeches he delivered during his visit to various cities in Switzerland. Consequently, the Switzerland-Armenia Association in Switzerland opened a lawsuit against Perinçek on the basis of denying the ‘Armenian genocide’. Perinçek was found guilty by Swiss courts. In response, Perinçek appealed to the ECtHR against Switzerland and in 2013 the ECtHR ruled in favor of Perinçek which was, in return appealed by Switzerland. The hearing which took place on 28 January 2015 at the Grand Chamber reaffirmed the decision in favor of Perinçek and the final verdict was given on 15 October 2015.

The Perinçek vs. Switzerland Case was a turning point which nullified the attempts by the ‘genocide lobby’ to frame the rejection of the characterization of the 1915 events as genocide as a crime. In this regard, this case plays a significant role for Turkish-Armenian relations which have been shaped by the 1915 events up to this day.
On 13 February, 2015 a roundtable meeting was held with Richard Giragosian, the Director of the Yerevan-based Regional Studies Center during his visit to AVİM.

Giragosian and AVİM analysts exchanged views on the current state of affairs in the South Caucasus, as well as Turkish-Armenian relations within this setting.

AVİM seeks to establish and maintain strong ties with think-tanks and experts from the Eurasian region and particularly the Caucasus, and likewise to contribute to the understanding of different viewpoints and perspectives embraced by these think-tanks and experts.
On 14 February 2015, AVİM’s Director Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç made a presentation at the conference titled The Armenian Question from 1915 to 2015 (1915’ten 2015’e Ermeni Meselesi) organized by Atatürkist Thought Association at Cumhuriyet Daily Conference Hall.

In his speech, Ambassador (R) Kılıç touched upon why and how the Armenian population, known as the ‘loyal nation’, organized rebellions against the Ottoman Empire and discussed the support of the Armenian population to the Tsarist Russia, which had invaded Eastern Anatolia during the First World War. Ambassador (R) Kılıç, in his presentation, discussed the scope and implementation of the Law of Resettlement, which was passed on 27 May 1915, the requests voiced by Armenians at Sevres, the Treaty of Lausanne, the Armenian acts of terror during the years 1975-1985, the first steps taken by Turkey in response to Armenian accusations, leading legal developments particularly the effect of the decision of the ECtHR on the Perinçek vs. Switzerland Case on Turkish-Armenian relations.
On 24 February 2015, AVİM, Center for Strategic Research of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Turkey (SAM), and the Turkic Council organized a meeting titled Turkic Council and Cooperation in Eurasia in the Light of Recent Regional Developments (Türk Keneşi ve Bölgedeki Gelişmeler Işığında Avrasya’da İşbirliği).

The meeting opened with a short clip introducing the Turkic Council and was followed by the opening remarks of the Secretary General of the Turkic Council Ambassador Ramil Hasanov and the Deputy Undersecretary of the Turkish Republic Ministry of Foreign Affairs Ali Kemal Aydin. The meeting proceeded with the opening speeches of the President of the Center for Strategic Research of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Turkey (SAM) Prof. Dr. Ali Resul Usul, Director of AVİM Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç, and the introductory speech by the Former Secretary General of the Turkic Council Ambassador (R) Halil Akıncı.

Following the presentations on the organizational structure and future plans of the Turkic Council, which was established in 2009, the meeting came to an end with a Q&A session.

Cooperation Council of Turkic Speaking States was established by the Nakhcivan Agreement signed at the Summit of the Heads of the Turkic Speaking States in 2009 held in Nakhchivan to facilitate cooperation and collaboration between Turkic speaking states. The members of the Council are Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Turkey. The Turkic Council was established a new regional cooperation mechanism in Eurasia and particularly in Central Asia and the Caucuses to facilitate international cooperation by encouraging the establishment of strong ties between Turkic speaking states. Despite being based on a common history, language, identity and culture, the Turkic Council moves much beyond these four common themes. On the contrary, the Council is taking the necessary steps to transform the already existing bilateral relations in the fields of economy, science, education, transportation, customs and tourism into a multilateral framework for cooperation.
On 11 March 2015, AVİM Senior Analyst Aslan Yavuz Şir and AVİM Analyst Hazel Çağan Elbir delivered speeches at the meeting organized by Süleyman Demirel University Law and Justice Club.

The conference, which lasted for three days, included discussions on the political and economic relations between Turkey and the U.S, public and political activities organized by the Turkish community in the U.S, entrepreneurship, as well as the Turkish-Armenian controversy.
On 17 March 2015, AVİM and the Center for International Political and Economic Relations at Ankara University Faculty of Political Science organized a meeting titled Montenegro and the Balkans (Karadağ ve Balkanlar).

The meeting, of which Former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Montenegro Ambassador (R) Miodrag Vlahovic was guest of honor, the Vice Chair of the Department of International Relations at Ankara University Prof. Dr. Çinlar Özen and Director of AVİM Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç attended as speakers.

The topic of discussion was predominantly centered on Montenegro and its importance in the political history of the Balkans, the rise of Serbian nationalism, and the referendum held in Montenegro. Alongside the aforementioned matters, the speakers also touched upon the debates centered on Montenegro’s NATO and EU membership perspective.

Given Turkey’s geopolitical status, it is necessary to divert more attention towards the Caucuses and the Balkans which are two key regions in Eurasia. In line with this, AVİM has allocated more time and resources on conducting research and studies on this region. Developments in the Balkans and global actors such as NATO, the EU, and the Russian Federation have great significance for Turkey. For this reason, as a country located in the Balkans, the conference held on Montenegro was an important event with regards to the analysis of the ongoing geopolitical developments.
On 18 March 2015, AVİM staff attended the 18 March Martyrs’ Day Ceremony organized by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Following the speeches by Ambassador (R) Ömer Engin Lütem and Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç, the audience raised their questions and voiced their opinions and comments on the subject in the Q&A session.
On 3 April, 2015 AVİM organized a meeting at Ankara University Culture and Art House on the occasion of introducing Altay Cengizer’s book titled ‘Adil Hafızanın Işığında: Birinci Dünya Savaşı’na Giden Yol ve Osmanlı İmparatorluğu’nun Sonu’. In his book, Altay Cengizer, Director General for Policy Planning at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Turkey, examines the political events which took place in the Ottoman Empire during World War I.
Some of the discussions which took place at the meeting include; the state of the Ottoman Empire in the period 1908-1915, the reasons behind why the Ottoman Empire entered World War I, an assessment of history from what Cengizer refers to as the “Liberal imperialist approach”, the Young Turks, and the 1908 Revolution and the Committee of Union and Progress.

The book, Adil Hafızanın Işığında, begins with a quote from Abdülhak Şinasi Hisar,

> The greatest of heroes, if not brought to life on paper, will cease to exist just like a candle blowing out in the wind, It will never be known... unless it is engraved in our memories, even miracles will be forgotten.

This quote clearly demonstrates Cengizer’s motivation behind writing this book and his perspective on the matter. It also points to another important aspect of his work; according to the author, the ‘liberal imperialist approach’ to history entails unjustified prejudice towards the Committee of Union and Progress (CUP) which has come to be accepted as fact by the general public. Taking this as a starting point, the author hopes to recover the reputation of the CUP.

Cengizer dedicates the last section of his work to the Armenian events which emerged in the last quarter of the 19th century in the Eastern Vilayets of the Ottoman Empire. As expected, these events are now more frequently labelled as ‘genocide’ in the international arena. Cengizer’s book, written from the abovementioned perspective, has taken on greater significance in the face of these developments.

On 28 April 2015, AVİM Senior Analysts Aslan Yavuz Şir and Dr. Turgut Kerem Tuncel made presentations at the symposium titled Turkey-Armenia Relations in the 100th Year of the 1915 Events (1915 Olaylarının 100. Yılında Türkiye - Ermenistan İlişkileri) organized by Uludağ University International Relations Club as part of the 20th Foreign Affairs Week.

At the Symposium, Aslan Yavuz Şir discussed the increasing significance of the legal dimensions of the events of 1915 and Dr. Turgut Kerem Tuncel shared his research on the formation of the Armenian Diaspora and its current socio-political situation.
On 30 April 2015, AVİM held a symposium at Ankara Palace titled Prospects for Turkish-Armenian Relations.

In the first session of the Symposium on Current State of Turkish -Armenian Relations, Altay Cengizer, Jeremy Salt, Orhan Gaffarlı and Uluç Gürkan presented their papers.

In the second session titled Past Tragedies and the Legal Dimension, Michael M. Gunter, M. Hakan Yavuz and Uluç Gürkan delivered their speeches.

The speakers of the third and the final session Historical Aspects of the Controversy were Tal Buenos, Seçil Karal Akgün and Christopher Gunn.

Ten scholars from Turkey, Azerbaijan, U.S.A, and Israel addressed an audience composed of the corps diplomatique, representatives various civil society organizations, and academics and researchers. The symposium was a reflection of the new perspectives and understandings which are becoming increasingly prevalent in Turkey and the World with respect to the Turkish-Armenian controversy.
At the symposium, speeches on the historical background of the genocide allegations were based on scholarly research and concrete analyses of archival documents. Compared with the earlier scholarly presentations in Turkey that was mostly providing rather general information and narratives, an important characteristic of these speeches are the specific and in-depth analyses of the important historical moments of the Turkish-Armenian controversy. This change demonstrates that in the near future there will be more specific, document-based and concrete historical studies. Such an improvement would help to the development of rational arguments that would ease the resolution of the Turkish-Armenian controversy.

The symposium also revealed the recent interest in the political aspects of the genocide claims in specific, and the Armenian-Turkish dispute in general. This is a very noteworthy sign revealing that as time progresses, pro-Armenian discourse that targets emotions, some of which emanate from religious affinities by relying on moral concepts such as empathy and conscience at the expense of historical facts derived from archival documents is losing its persuasiveness and people are getting more aware of the political abuse of that moral discourse. This may be an important development to achieve a fair and rational resolution of the Turkish-Armenian controversy.
On 5-8 May 2015, AVİM Honorary Chairman Ambassador (R) Ömer Engin Lütem, AVİM Director Ambassador (R) Alev Kılıç and AVİM Analysts Aslan Yavuz Şir, Mehmet Oğuzhan Tulun and Dr. Turgut Kerem Tuncel made presentations at the symposium organized by Atatürk University with the title The 2nd Turkish-Armenian Relations and the Great Powers International Symposium (II. At the Symposium that was held in twenty-five sessions, a total of 135 scholars, 120 from Turkey and 15 from abroad, took part in in-depth and comprehensive discussions on the historical, political, social, economic and cultural aspects of Turkish-Armenian relations and the role of the Great Powers. At the Symposium, participants expressed their wishes to get together with scholars from the South Caucasian countries including Armenia, and other countries in the near future.
On 13 May 2015, Prof. Joseph Brian Diescho, an expert on strategic leadership, corporate and public relations, policy analysis, (social) transformation and change, diversity management, African politics, and constitutional democracy and the Director of the Namibian Institute of Public Administration and Management, gave a conference at AVİM titled The Policy of Mass Killings in the Early 20th Century in Colonial Africa: The Case of Genocide in Namibia and the Lessons Learned.

At the conference, attended by scholars, journalists, corps diplomatique, current and former diplomats, Prof. Diescho expressed his opinions on the colonization of Africa by Europe and its ongoing human and economic consequences. Prof. Diescho also voiced his opinions on the mass killings, which some scholars refer to as genocide, perpetuated by Germany against the Herero and Nama peoples in Namibia in the early 20th century. Within this framework, Prof. Diescho also informed the audience of the legal specifications of genocide.

This conference, held by Prof. Diescho, was significant for underlining the importance of this historical event which was overlooked in the speeches delivered by Papa Francis and Joachim Gauck on 12 April 2015 and 23 April 2015 respectively, which had spurred a lot of controversy at the time.
On 14-15 May 2015, AVİM Honorary Chairman Ambassador (R) Ömer Engin Lütem presented a paper at the symposium titled The Future of Turkish-Armenian Relations, Fair Memory and Normalization on the 100th Anniversary of the 1915 Events (1915 Olaylarının 100.Yılında Türk-Ermeni İlişkilerinin Yarını, Adil Hafıza ve Normalleşme) organized jointly by Marmara University, Turkish Historical Society and Üsküdar Municipality.

On 15 May 2015, AVİM organized an event for the occasion of launching Uluç Gürkan’s book titled Ermeni Katliamı Suçlaması, Yargılama ve Karar: Malta 1919-1921 (The Accusation of the Armenian Massacre, the Trial and the Judgement: Malta 1919-1921) at which the significance of the Malta Trials on genocide allegations today were discussed.

In his book, Uluç Gürkan moves beyond a mere descriptive study of history and argues that the prosecutions of 144 Ottoman officials by the British in Malta lacked evidence to proceed with a trial which in return makes any genocide allegations invalid. The discussions predominantly revolved around this argument and the possible consequences which may arise of it.

At the book launch, Gürkan expressed his views on the necessity to request the documents of the Malta Trials from the United Kingdom to use them as concrete evidence against genocide claims. Aside from the views conveyed in the book, this is an indication of the increased steps taken by Turkish intellectuals against genocide claims. This is a significant step forward for solving the Turkish-Armenian controversy.

28 Ocak AİHM Perinçek - İsviçre Duruşmasının Işığında Türk-Ermeni Sorunu

3 Şubat 2015, Ankara
The Perinçek v. Switzerland Case, to which Turkey, Armenia and France also involved as third parties, was finalized on 15 October 2015 with the decision of Grand Chamber of the European Court of Human Rights that ruled in favor of Perinçek. The Grand Chamber judged that speaking rejecting the characterization of the 1915 events as genocide does not constitute hate crime or racial discrimination. Consequently, the ECtHR Grand Chamber ruled that Perinçek’s freedom of expression cannot be restricted under these circumstances. As such, the judgement of the ECtHR Grand Chamber has significant implications for Turkish-Armenian controversy which have been shaped by genocide allegations. Moreover, an in-depth analysis of the stages of the case at hand plays an essential role for the understanding of the disagreement between Turkey and Armenia and the form it has taken today.

AVİM Trainee Program

AVİM offers trainee program opportunities all year round. Applicants from Turkey and other countries may apply for short and long term trainee programs. Participants to AVİM Trainee Program are expected to possess a high interest in Eurasian affairs. Ideally, AVİM provides trainee program opportunities to undergraduate students, fresh graduates and Master’s and PhD students, who plan to pursue academic or diplomatic carriers.

AVİM Trainee Program participants are expected to provide assistance in organizational matters such as supporting the AVİM staff in organizing different events, monitoring of the developments in the Eurasian region as well as to contribute to AVİM reports and other publications.

AVİM Trainee Program participants are assigned specific topics relevant to their research interests during their trainee program. By the end of the trainee program period, participants are expected to submit a policy paper based on their studies. This helps the participants to focus on the subjects about which they want to gain a deeper knowledge of in a professional think-tank environment under the tutorship of the AVİM analysts.

In 2015, a total of 25 young researchers from Turkey, Afghanistan, Slovenia, Spain, and Ukraine participated in the AVİM Trainee Program.

Özge Nur Öğütcü is responsible for the coordination of the AVİM trainee program.

Candidates may contact Ms. Öğütcü at staj@avim.org.tr or o.ogutcu@avim.org.tr.
I was a participant of the AVİM Trainee Program from March to July 2015. I chose AVİM for the trainee program because I knew it would help me to deepen my knowledge of the Eurasian political context, as well as to put my previous academic experience I had on the region into practice. As a foreigner, it was always interesting to discuss topics on Turkey, its neighbors and the region with AVİM’s analysts and to learn from them. I must say that the atmosphere with the staff and the rest of trainee program participants at the time was always pleasant. At the end of my stay at AVİM, I could really notice that I had gained knowledge and experience on the Eurasian region and that my contributions were valued and appreciated by the Center.

Master’s Degree in International Relations, Spain
I participated in AVİM Trainee Program during my research stay at the Center for European Studies at Middle East Technical University. This program was an important part of my PhD curriculum and one of my friends recommended AVİM to me as an institution with a dynamic research environment. What I experienced at AVİM totally met my high expectations and even more. First of all, at AVİM I learned a lot from working with both young but extremely qualified analysts and with senior directors. Second, as a participant of the AVİM Trainee Program, I was able to take part in numerous meetings, conferences and workshops organized by the Center, which was extremely beneficial for my own research. Thanks to AVİM, I had pleasure to meet and talk to many talented scholars, high rank politicians and experts in different fields. Furthermore, AVİM grants its trainee program participants with quite some space for their creativity meaning that at any time one of us could come up with his/her own topic of interest and would be very encouraged to produce a commentary or an article that would later be published. Last but not the least, at AVİM I found a very friendly and warm international group of people who were always helpful and supportive. I sincerely recommend AVİM as a place for trainee program for the next generations of students.

Maryna Shevtsova
PhD Candidate at Humboldt University, Ukraine
I first joined the AVİM Trainee Program in November 2014, when I was a senior at the Department of Sociology at METU to expand my knowledge on Eurasia and to look at events from an international relations perspective as a student of Sociology. The AVİM Trainee Program has thus far met all my expectations and has contributed to my academic and professional development.

This program has been an excellent opportunity for me to become familiar with a professional working environment, which I had no experience of before I joined the AVİM Trainee Program. In addition to this, as a trainee, I have attended countless meetings, panels and conferences organized by AVİM in coordination with universities and international organizations, where I had the opportunity to meet prominent scholars and diplomats. Moreover, as a young researcher and a graduate of Sociology, this program has also allowed me to see my weaknesses in conducting research, gathering information and writing reports. Being a part of AVİM, with its Analysts who are always eager to help and share information, has been an excellent opportunity to gain practical experience, follow current events from an analytical perspective and write reports, commentaries and papers on topics in line with my research interests.

Furthermore, I feel lucky to have the opportunity to learn from the invaluable experiences and knowledge of both AVİM Honorary Chairman Ömer Engin Lütem and AVİM Director Alev Kılıç.

For all of these reasons, joining the AVİM Trainee Program and working alongside experienced analysts is an excellent opportunity to gain professional working experience particularly for new graduates looking to pursue further research on Eurasia.

The Protocol between AVİM and BIEST

In December 2015, AVİM and BIEST (Bilkent International Relations and European Union Politics Society), a students’ association of the University of Bilkent, signed a protocol on cooperation which foresees joint activities between AVİM and BIEST.

Within this framework, members of the BIEST students association are expected to have the opportunity to establish ties with AVİM and other think-tanks, and meet with specialists whose expertise lie within the field of international relations with special focus on Eurasia.

In the scope of this protocol, students of International Relations, Political Science, and Global and International Affairs of Bilkent University will be given priority in admittance to AVİM trainee program.
In 2015, a group of fourteen researchers composed of AVİM analysts and scholars, graduate and PhD students from the Department of Sociology and Eurasian Studies Program of the Middle East Technical University, Karabük University and Koç University, carried out an ethnographic field research on the topic of Muslim Communities in Georgia: Minority Rights, Identity, and Politics.

This research, which will extend to the first half of 2016, aims to uncover the social experiences of Muslim minorities (Borchali Turks/Azerbaijanis and Adjarians) living in Georgia, including the Ahiska Turks who were relocated and whose return will now be facilitated as part of a pre-condition of Georgia’s being member of the European Council. This study intends to look into the experiences of Muslim minorities in the scope of minority rights, identity and politics as well as the legal acts carried out by Georgia under its obligation to the international organisations to which it is a member of.

Following the finalisation of the research, it is envisaged that a book will be published scrutinizing the issues of Muslim minorities in Georgia from past to present, international and national regulations and formal and informal perspectives on minority rights in post-Soviet Georgia, the socio-economic and socio-political status of Adjarian and Borchali Turks, the return attempts by Ahiska Turks and complications with regards their integration, the attitudes and stances of Georgian-Armenians and Armenia on the return of Ahiska Turks, and the policies of Turkey and Azerbaijan on minorities in Georgia.

Assessments of 2015
There is benefit to analyze developments in Armenia in 2015 by dividing them into two. The ceremonies and events to commemorate the centennial of the Resettlement marked the first half of the past year. While these fell off the radar in the second half, the changes to be made in the Armenian Constitution and the objections to these changes by the opposition parties came to the fore. On the other hand, in the last two months of 2015, the Karabakh issue, and accordingly the national security of the country rose to prominence. We will try to briefly summarize Armenia’s status in 2015 within the context of relations with Turkey and the Karabakh issue.

A lot of effort was put in Armenia to commemorate the centennial of the Resettlement (genocide according to Armenians) in a flamboyant fashion. Therefore, many foreign statesmen were invited to Armenia, but eventually attendance was limited. However, François Hollande’s and Vladimir Putin’s visit to Erivan to attend the ceremonies and the fact that they delivered speeches drew the attention of the public. On the other hand, the attendance of 17 heads of state, 3 parliament speakers and 5 prime ministers to the ceremonies to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Gallipoli Battles overshadowed the ceremonies held in Erivan in the eyes of the public opinion. It was seen that popular personalities’ visit to Erivan, such as Kim Kardashian, rather drew the attention of the US and was criticized by several circles in Erivan.

The fact that Recep Tayyip Erdoğan, who is the president of a country which rejects the genocide allegations, was invited to attend the ceremonies in Erivan on April 24 proved to be an inappropriate move and led the already tense relations between the two countries to be negatively affected.

The centennial of the Resettlement was flamboyantly commemorated in the Diaspora. It is seen that France and the US stood out in this regard. Indeed, there was high level participation from the government and local administrations to the ceremonies held in France. In the US, on the other hand, despite the high level participation in states with large Armenian population, the lack of interest to the centennial at the federal level, apart from President Obama’s usual message, was a noticeable fact.
The strong reaction by Turkey, especially by President Erdoğan, to the few statesmen who support the Armenian allegation such as Pope Francis, and the possibility of deteriorating bilateral relations rendered the support to genocide claims to be limited and even led several countries to take a step back. For instance, Luxembourguian and Austrian governments made statements dialing down resolutions adopted by their parliaments, the word genocide was not included in resolutions adopted by the Belgian and Bulgarian Parliaments, and a draft resolution was sent back to the commission by the German Bundestag. Furthermore, in France, which is the greatest supporter of the genocide claim, a legal arrangement supported by Armenians to criminalize genocide denial was failed to be implemented.

As part of the efforts to organize centennial events, a commission to determine the legal basis of demands from Turkey was established in Armenia. These demands, which apparently include the recognition of the genocide claim, indemnities from Turkey for the 1915 events, the return of Armenian properties, and perhaps territorial demands, even if symbolic such as Mount Ağrı, were expected to be brought up in 2015. However, as we have mentioned above, it never happened. Furthermore, following European Court of Human Right’s Perinçek decision, it will no longer be easy to bring up demands related to genocide claims.

Other than appeasing the Armenian and Diaspora public opinion, it is impossible to think that bringing up such demands would benefit Armenia. On the contrary, it will cause a deadlock in the already poor relations. It will lead Turkey to further support Azerbaijan and cause Armenia to literally surrender to Russia.

Another negative development for Armenia in 2015 has been ECHR’s exoneration of Doğu Perinçek, who characterizes Armenian genocide allegations as an international lie. Armenia, even though was no need, intervened to the Perinçek case, and became one of the losing parties alongside Switzerland and France when Perinçek won the case. Armenia attempted to hide this failure from its own public by expressing satisfaction due to there being no words expressing doubt about the Armenian genocide in the Grand Chamber’s verdict. Despite what Armenia may claim, stating that there is no Armenian genocide and defending this idea, without insulting Armenians, has become possible across all of Europe. By contrast with this, those who deny the Jewish Holocaust are being penalized in many countries. The ECHR verdict has literally made the Armenian genocide allegations second rate in comparison to the Jewish Holocaust.

Karabakh is another issue in which Armenia has failed this year. No resolution has been found for this conflict since the 1994 ceasefire. The co-chairs of Minks Group (in reality their governments) see this lack of resolution to be in their favor. However, the persistent (because international law is on its side) demands of an increasingly powerful Azerbaijan for the ending of the occupation of Karabakh and other Azeri territories, the probability that the border clashes will escalate, and the fact that Armenia is beginning to look like the losing side in these clashes are all developments to the detriment of Armenia. On the other hand, ECHR’s 16 June 2015 verdict expressing that Karabakh is not an independent entity has gone against the Armenian claims on this issue and has eliminated the possibility of Karabakh’s independence being recognized by other countries. Furthermore, the parliamentary and local elections in Karabakh that have been this year not being recognized by many countries is a development to the detriment of the Karabakh independence argument. Additionally, the Political Affairs Committee of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe has adopted a draft resolution that points to Karabakh not being independent and furthermore likens the forceful removal of the Azeris in this region to ethnic cleansing. As expected, the adoption of this draft resolution by the Assembly would be a heavy blow to Armenia’s Karabakh policy. Lastly, the fact that Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, and Tajikistan; Muslim members of the Collective Security Treaty Organization -that Armenia currently chairs and thinks will provide its security alongside Russia, seem unwilling to support against Azerbaijan constitutes a fiasco for Armenia.

Consequently, for Armenia and Armenians, 2015 has been a year in which genocide allegations gained an international support very much below what was expected, in which these allegations had no effect whatsoever on Turkey, in which official claims against Turkey were failed to be put forth, in which ECHR’s Perinçek case verdict damaged Armenian’s argument for the indisputability of their genocide allegations, and in which serious regressions have been experienced in the Karabakh issue.

It can be seen that Armenia will experience serious crises with Turkey and especially Azerbaijan in 2016 and beyond if it keeps pursuing its current uncompromising policies. Since the Minsk Group co-chairs the US, France, and Russia do not want the jeopardizing of peace in the South Caucasus, it is very likely that Armenia will, in the future, be forced the give the concessions with regards to the Karabakh conflict that it does not want to give now. Meanwhile, it should not be forgotten that the resolution or the moving towards the resolution of the Karabakh conflict will bring alongside it the normalization of Turkey-Armenia relations such as the opening of the borders and the establishment of diplomatic relations.
Recent history of Anatolia, heartland of Turkey, bears witness to human tragedies. The era preceding and succeeding the First World War was a period of disintegration, collapse, and partitioning of the Ottoman Empire. The aim was to displace the Turkish people from the Balkans, where in many regions they constituted the majority of the population, as well as from western Anatolia, to the East, to land locked interior of Anatolia. It would not be justifiable to assess this observation as one of pessimism, cynicism, as one sided, biased, or subjective. History has provided Turkish people with a unique opportunity, with no room for ambiguity or means of denial, to see and fathom how the Allied Powers of the time aimed to shape the future of Turkey, with a written document, worked out consciously and through negotiations among themselves. This document, casting lasting bearings to a whole nation, was the Treaty of Sévres, designated to be enforced on Turkey following the First World War. This imposition, which aroused the indignation of the people, leading to a national struggle of life or death, was successfully scrapped away, to establish the foundations of the Republic of Turkey with the Treaty of Peace of Lausanne.

More than 5 million civilian Turks perished as they were killed mercilessly in the period from the rebellion in the peninsula of Peloponnese, the Ottoman-Russian war of 1877-1878, the Balkan wars of 1912-1913 to the First World War that set the stage for Armenian insurgency and collusion with the enemy forces as the Ottoman forces waged a war on five diverse fronts. The number of Turkish-Muslim civilian losses during 1914-1918 in eastern Anatolia alone, perpetrated by Armenians or Armenian involved foreign forces, with full records in the Turkish archives, surpass 500.000. The number of Turks forcefully displaced during this era, predominantly from the Balkans and the Caucasus is a multiplication of the above cited figures. Neither the Turk in the street in specific, nor the Turkish people in general have not forgotten the enormity of this humanitarian crime that Turkish people were subjected to in those years of turmoil. It is, however, one thing not to forget and a different thing to scratch history, to galvanize feelings of vengeance, or to carry forward one-sided historical grievances or unsettled accounts into present.
The Turkish people chose to bury past tragedies to memory, opened a new chapter with the establishment of the Republic, selected the path to make a new beginning to build the future, resolved to raise the country -devastated from decades of war, impoverished economy, destructed infrastructure, perished generations and elites- to the contemporary level of civilization. This titanic undertaking and resolve, starting almost from ground zero and requiring much sacrifice has paid off, making Turkey eligible for membership to the group of world’s largest economies, the G-20, where Turkey assumed the rotating chair for the year 2015 and also hosted the summit meeting.

On the other hand, in the period when the country was inward looking and focused on national unity and economic development, Turkey was late in recognizing that historical prejudices were re-surfacing in a haunting manner. At present, it can be observed that the unity and stability of the Republic is facing political calculations with a view to hindering her to assume a more powerful regional position and say. At the same time, the regional position of Turkey is apt to transform in the evolving global geopolitical shift. What we are witnessing today is the emergence of a new concept of Eurasia, a continuous interaction from the Pacific to the Atlantic where Turkey is moving from being an easternmost extension or outpost of the West to the center of Eurasia. It is thus acquiring a new role -together with the Balkans, the Caucasus, Iran, and Central Asian republics- of forming the center piece and nexus of the East and the West.

This enviable path of development of the Republic and people of Turkey has not been free of interventions and endeavors of erecting hurdles in the way to divert their energy and focus on this successful march. One of these are Armenian allegations and claims. Following a period of silence and reality of historical facts, some extremist, radical or militant groups in the Armenian diaspora started demonizing Turks and Turkey, conjuring allegations of genocide and related claims. What started as a marginal, fringe group voice succeeded in spreading in the wider community, eventually getting international attention through years of violent terrorism carried out in a number of countries by those Armenian groups. As the phenomenon of terrorism has become a serious threat for the international community at present, its root causes under study and investigation, it would be of relevance to bring to attention how Armenian terrorism started, was tolerated, and terrorists became hailed as heroes.

Concluding this background introduction, I now come to the title of this article, where Armenia and Armenians go wrong: The miseries and tragedies suffered by the Armenian population of the Ottoman Empire is acknowledged in Turkey. They are neither denied nor minimized. The Armenians of eastern Anatolia were subjected to forced resettlement in the southern territories of the Empire in 1915. It is estimated, upon reliable historical evidence that up to 300,000 lost their lives due to diseases, deprivation, geographic-climatic conditions as well as harassment of local bandits. By citing this number, the intention is not to play a numbers game. 300,000 is already an enormous number. Every single life is precious and every single life lost deserves to be honored with blessing and condolence.

However, what needs to be recalled here, underlining the wrong that is being done, is the historical fact that during the same period, at the same geography, in excess of 500,000 Turks-Muslims perished under similar conditions. To close the eye to the tragedies of such a big number, to develop a narrative as if it were only the Armenians who were victimized, to single out the Turks as the perpetrators serve only to provoke the Turkish people to deep indignation. Scratching historical past in this biased and revengeful manner revives the tragic memories of the Turkish people, brings out the suppressed pain of their losses and in turn, opens the door for feelings of counter revanchism. No people’s respect and pain for their losses is less than others. The silence of the Turkish people for their losses should not be interpreted as one of indifference, but rather as one of realism and moral high ground. Efforts and attempts to reverse this understanding is bound to bring about more enmity and revengefulness in place of confining historical facts of the past to scholarly research.

Armenia and the Armenian diaspora are in need of reassessing whose interests the continuing campaign against Turkey and the Turkish people serve as well as who bears the brunt of this campaign. Today, the realistic and humanitarian gesture of Turkey, stating readiness to share mutual tragedies and bereavement, is to be understood and the extended hand to be held. The rational way forward for both peoples for a win-win solution is to start working on means for establishing bilateral and regional cooperation.

On the eve of the New Year, as we leave behind the year of 2015 where there were great expectations on part of Armenians, which turned out to be unrealistic, even wrong, our New Year’s wish and resolution for 2016 is to have rational and conciliatory understanding to guide us to the future.

Concluding Remarks

In 2015, AVİM carried out a substantial amount of work and organized numerous meetings, conferences, and panels. To paint a general picture, in 2015, it was possible to make a much closer observation and analysis of the evolution of the international conjuncture. In this sense, the following developments have particularly stood out: the beginning of the Trans-Atlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) dialogues encompassing both sides of the Atlantic, the signing of the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) Agreement by 12 countries, the establishment of the Eurasian Economic Union under the leadership of the Russian Federation, focusing on former Soviet geography, the expanding area of interest of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO), the rise of China as an economic giant and developments taking place with regards to the New Silk Road Project described as the ‘One Belt One Road’ (OBOR) Project and in parallel to this, the expeditious establishment of the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB).

The aforementioned developments, all of which point to a change in the balance of power and the formation of a new concept of Eurasia stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific are of interest to AVİM particularly in relation to the implications this creates for Turkey. This new formation implies a shift in Turkey’s position, which acts as point of connection between the East and West, towards the center of the region together with the Balkans, Caucuses, Central Asia, and Iran. In light of this evaluation, AVİM, in its studies, has placed an emphasis on the need to establish relations which go beyond the long-standing traditional and historical ties between the countries of this region.

Within this changing geopolitical and geostrategic formation, we have witnessed developments unique to 2015. The highlights of 2015 pertinent to Turkey and AVİM’s areas of interests were the following: the Gallipoli Victory Commemorations, Turkey’s G20 Presidency and the G20 Leaders’ Summit held in Antalya. Moreover, another important area of study for AVİM was the 100th Anniversary of the forced resettlement of the Armenians during the First World War and Armenian claims and events organized around this occasion. Assessing and responding to such claims upheld by Armenia have been a significant part of AVİM’s activities in 2015.

When making an assessment of 2015, one can surmise that Armenia and the Armenian Diaspora have fallen short of spreading and imposing their claims and narrative which are known to be biased and far from the realities of the past. As a consequence, they have further failed to realize the historical, legal and political initiatives they have initiated. In fact, the Armenian narrative has received a serious and irrevocable blow on the judicial front.

It has however transpired that Armenian allegations have predominantly found root in the context of religion. During a period in which islamophobia discourses is on the rise, Armenians have partly succeeded in receiving support by basing their claims and statements on differences stemming from religion or religious affiliations. Time will reveal the extent to which this evident victory will last or be of value in light of global relations in the contemporary world. Consequently, Armenia and the Armenian Diaspora, in a year in which every possible means were employed, are now able to have a chance to chart a roadmap for the future and make a better assessment of the virtues of regional cooperation rather than confrontation. Time will tell whether they will be able to turn this to their advantage or not.

From a visionary outlook and understanding, whether Armenia, as an extension of the West, will play a key role in the newly forming Eurasia alongside Turkey and whether it will take part in regional cooperation initiatives and the peaceful resolution of the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict are all dependent on Armenia’s decisions and collective wisdom.
