"In conditions of separation, Brexit, and EU's various other problems - starting with the migrant crisis all the way to terrorism - the entry of our region into the EU is a contribution to consolidating that very idea. Not to mention that it's a factor of calming the tensions in the region," he told reporters in Bled, Slovenia.

"We remain committed to our goal - and that is full-fledged membership in the EU - and the only thing is that we think there should be a transparent perspective. That perspective can have a happy or a sad ending, but I hope it will be happy, that is, that we will join the EU before it falls apart," Dacic concluded.
