They discussed "further strengthening good neighborly relations and regional cooperation," the Serbian government said.

Brnabic "stressed that the two countries have plenty of room for development of mutual relations, especially in the field of economy and tourism, adding that the implementation of the Action Plan for regional economic space in the (...) Balkans is an important issue that will facilitate and improve cooperation," the Serbian government announced.
She also "pointed out that she had sent a call to PM Zoran Zaev to visit Belgrade and assessed that this would be a positive step in the relations of the two countries."
Brnabic and Jovanovska-Tipko "agreed that without political stability there is no economic prosperity, and that an honest and open dialogue is the only way to bridge all outstanding issues."
