The Serbian parliament has rejected the oppositions proposal to adopt a Resolution on the recognition of genocide against the Armenians in the Ottoman Empire, the Balkan Service of Radio Liberty reported.

The resolution was submitted by Serbias former Prime Minister Zoran Zivkovic, who currently heads the New Party.

Speaking to Radio Liberty, Zivkovic said it is important not to forget the historical fact that some countries were ready to kill tens of thousands of people at some time.

We have had such cases so often, and nobody guarantees that something like this will happen again. Thats why remembering the past is important, Zivkovic said.
