U.S. News (25 April 2018)

Armenian President Armen Sarkissian said on Wednesday he would start talks with political forces to try and resolve the political crisis in the country.

"I am starting consultations with parliamentary and non-parliamentary representatives to discuss the situation that has been come about in the country and a way out of it," Sarkissian said in a statement.

Meanwhile police moved into the center of the capital Yerevan as protesters gathered to demonstrate against the country's ruling elite, witnesses said.
