There no longer are and will not be untouchable people in Armenia.

Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan on Thursday said the aforementioned at his public assembly with the residents of Goris town, in Syunik Province.

I dont care who has committed a crime, or any unlawful action; such persons shall be held accountable, Pashinyan noted. We will put and end to and uproot boundlessness [by someone in power] in the Republic of Armenia. The time of the feudalists and the little princes has passed [in the country].

But the PM noted that all this is possible thanks to the peoples support, and said he has this support.

[But] at whichever moment I sense that I dont have your support, I will not stay in the Prime Ministers office for one second.
