Serbia will never take part in anti-Russian hysteria and will never impose sanctions against Moscow, Serbian Defense Minister Aleksandar Vulin said at a meeting with his Russian counterpart Sergei Shoigu at the International Army Games.

"You know that Serbia is a great friend of Russia. Serbia will never take part in anti-Russian hysteria. We will never impose sanctions against the Russian Federation and will never be a country, which speaks or thinks ill of Russia," he stressed.

Vulin added that Russia and Serbia "had been friends in the most difficult times and would continue to be friends at the best of times."
