The foundation run by US billionaire George Soros said Thursday that the last of its operations in Hungary would cease by August 31, with its activities being transferred to Berlin.

The Open Society Foundations (OSF) announced in May that it was leaving Hungary, citing what it called the repressive policies of nationalist firebrand Prime Minister Viktor Orban.

There are still some colleagues working here in the office, but we will have closed for good by 31 August, the OSF spokesman in Budapest Daniel Makonnen told AFP.
