Independent candidate for president Salome Zurbishvili is one of the two candidates remaining in a large, competitive field, who will compete in the upcoming runoff election for President of Georgia.

After a reportedly tense meeting at Georgian Dream headquarters on Wednesday, Zurbishvili was asked by reporters about her plans if elected president. She shot back, "Why should I tell you about my plans in the street? I will speak about it when I outline my plans." The response indicates that Zurbishvili has not yet outlined a strategic plan for her potential future role.

Although Zurbishvili is technically independent, she is supported, financially and verbally, by the ruling Georgian Dream party.

Zurbishvili also refused to say whether she personally took part in the meeting at the party headquarters, attended by secretive billionaire and party leader Bidzina Ivanishvili.

She did, however, express her full confidence that she will win in the second round of elections.
