Five companies and consortia have been short-listed to file bids in a 145 million euro ($165.65 million) tender to design and build a gas pipeline between Bulgaria and Greece, data from the company overseeing delivery of the project, ICGB, showed on Tuesday, according to Reuters.

The selected bidders should file their offers next month to build the 182-km (113-mile) pipeline aimed at transporting mainly Azeri gas to Bulgaria.

Some 11 companies filed initial bids.

A consortium between two Bulgarian construction companies and Italys Bonatti, a joint venture between Germanys Max Streicher and Greek Terna as well as a consortium between French Spiecapag, a unit of Vinci, and Bulgarian Trace Group were allowed to file bids.

Greek company J & P AVAX and a tie-up between China Petroleum Pipeline Engineering and Greeces Aktor were also admitted to file bids for the pipeline Sofia hopes to become operational in 2020.
