The Guidon (10 April 2019)

12 years after its landmark summit in Cebu, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) still has a ways to go in meeting the goals of its Economic Community Blueprint [ ] was originally slated to come into full force by 2015. The ambitious proposal, whose scope is rivaled only by the European Unions (EU) own single market, would see the abolition of barriers in the trade of goods and services and the movement of labor within the regional bloc.
