Xinhua (05 July 2019)

Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc and his visiting Armenian counterpart Nikol Pashinyan agreed here on Friday to take measures to boost the multifaceted cooperation between the two countries in the future.

The two prime ministers reached consensus on deepening bilateral cooperation on economy, trade, investment and science, and broadening cooperation on other fields, including education, training, healthcare, culture, sports, tourism, security and national defense, Vietnam News Agency reported.

After their talks, the two leaders witnessed the signing of an agreement between the two governments on educational and scientific cooperation.
