EurActiv (29 August 2019)

National governments across the EU have named their candidates for the next European Commission, which will be headed by Germanys Ursula von der Leyen. Here is a rundown of the names on the table so far.

After an informal deadline of 26 August for all names to be submitted to the incoming Commission came and went, von der Leyen will now hold meetings with the prospective candidates.

EURACTIV understands a full list will only be released once that process is over. Confirmed nominees will then be grilled by Parliamentary committees starting in late September and then face a confirmation vote by MEPs in October.

Stay tuned to this Commissioner tracker, which will be updated with any new developments and will follow the candidates through their confirmation hearings in the European Parliament.
