A drone attack struck on Sunday a position held by the Iraqi Popular Mobilization Forces in Ar-Rutbah district in Iraq's western border with neighboring Syria, a security source said.

It's still unclear who was behind the drone attack, the source told Alforat News without giving further details.

The attack is part of a string of blasts and drone sightings at Popular Mobilization Forces bases across Iraq since mid-July, for which no one has claimed responsibility.

Last month, a drone attack targeted a base held by Brigade 45, a Popular Mobilization Forces unit, in Anbar province in western Iraq, killing one fighter and severely wounding a second.
