
DUTCH CASE OPENS NEW ERA FOR CLIMATE-CHANGE LITIGATION

-

09.01.2020

EU Observer (8 January 2020)

Over the past few years, an increasing number of citizens and NGOs have started taking legal action to hold governments and corporations accountable for failing to address the climate crisis.

Last year, 2019, a Berlin court ruled on the first-ever climate litigation case against the German government for failing to meet its own 2020 climate target.

For more: <https://euobserver.com/environment/147061>

Kaynak/Source: