A court in Orasje in Bosnia says people convicted by the towns court martial during the 1990s war will soon be asked to start serving their sentences - but some insist that they didnt even know they were being tried.

The municipal court in Orasje has told BIRN that it intends to begin to enforce sentences handed down to 47 people, mainly Serbs, who were convicted of war crimes by the court martial in the northern Bosnian town between 1993 and 1995.
