The Kazakh government and the National Bank will adopt a plan to help restart economic growth following the fallout of COVID-19, said Kazakh Minister of National Economy Ruslan Dalenov during a July 14 government meeting.

First of all, following the instruction of the head of the state to develop a package of additional measures to support the economy in case the situation worsens, the joint action plan of the government and the National Bank is now being prepared. It has been suggested to consider a draft plan at the economic policy council meeting and to adopt it if the participants are in favor, said Dalenov.
