Clashes along the Armenia-Azerbaijan border on July 12-14 not only triggered widespread international condemnation but also highlighted Yerevan's desperation to divert world attention from occupied territories.

According to Azerbaijan's Defense Ministry, army officers and soldiers of their country were killed when the Armenian army suddenly attacked their positions with mortars and howitzers.

The deputies of Turkish political parties in the Grand National Assembly, be that ruling AK Party or opposition CHP, MHP, and İYİ Party, signed a joint statement, condemning the Armenian attack and said that the issue concerned the national interests of Turkey.
