More than one in two citizens of the European Union are concerned about the misuse of their online data by fraudsters and cybercriminals, a new EU study has found.

The news comes ahead of the publication of the Commissions Security Union Strategy, which is due to be presented by the Commission on Friday (24 July) and will include efforts to bolster the EUs resilience against online security threats.

The plans were originally due to be released earlier this week but faced a setback as the college of Commissioners meeting was postponed.
