Hürriyet Daily (11 August 2020)

As tensions rose between Azerbaijan and Armenia amid clashes at the border and military preparations, a Turkish scholar has said there is a likelihood for clashes to occur until the territorial conflict between the two countries is resolved.

Armenia and Azerbaijan are ready to clash with one another at every chance possible, said Prof. Mitat Çelikpala from Kadir Has University, specialized in Eurasian security and politics, in an online interview with Hürriyet Daily News.

We will face these clashes emerging when least expected until the territorial issue gets resolved between Azerbaijan and Armenia, Çelikpala said.
