Saudi Arabias Foreign Minister Prince Faisal bin Farhan visited Iraq on Thursday and is expected to announce new agreements between the two nations.

This visit comes at a time when Baghdad and Riyadh are seeking to strengthen their ties, especially in the field of energy as Iraq is experiencing a shortage of electricity.

"I was pleased to visit Iraq today, a country that we have deep ties with, which are taken from history and will see an ambitious future," Prince Farhan said after meeting Iraqi Prime Minister Mustafa Al Kadhimi.
