Middle East Monitor (19 September 2020)

A senior Iraqi official announced on Friday that Iraq has decided to compensate 90,000 civilians harmed by the liberation battles in the Nineveh governorate, in the north of the country.

This came in a statement made by Mohammed Mahmoud, director of the sub-committee for compensating people affected by war operations in the Nineveh Governorate, to Anadolu Agency.

Mahmoud explained that: It was decided to compensate 90,000 civilians in the Nineveh governorate, who suffered material and human losses during the battles that the security forces fought against Daesh in the region.
