Independent Balkan News Agency (ibna) (18 September 2020)

According to a new poll by Gallup International conducted in Bulgaria amid the political crisis, the two ruling parties GERB and BSP are losing power and go head to head in vote intention. The poll also shows that citizens are either oriented to abstain from voting (29.4%) or to say I do not support anyone (6.8%) or to choose new options such as Slavi Trifonov who receives 8.3% of the vote.

However, much of I do not support anyone on election day is likely to turn into a denial of vote.

On the other hand, the MRF Movement is at 7.6%, while the United Patriots are at 2.7%, partially overcoming the shock of the peak of the demonstrations a month and a half ago and remains on the verge of entering the next National Assembly.
