Thousands of Europeans living in the UK risk missing the deadline to apply for settled status in Britain because they are unaware of the new settlement scheme or lack the digital skills to complete the application, according to new research.

After June 2021 EU citizens living in the UK will be legally required to prove their status, and the UK government launched the EU settlement scheme in 2019.

However, the application system is digital-only and the UK government plans to give EU citizens a digital code only to prove their residency.
