EU member states on Tuesday (1 December) warned European negotiators not to lose their nerve in negotiations with Britain, in a rare reproach as post-Brexit talks entered their most delicate phase.

Negotiations in London towards an EU-UK deal are deadlocked □ with some in Brussels now seeing Thursday as a last chance to decide whether a deal is possible before 1 January, when Britain will no longer be bound by EU rules.

Failure to clinch a deal would cause deep economic disruption between the two sides, and pressure is high to finalise a zero tariffs, zero quotas accord, especially given the problems caused by the Covid-19 pandemic.
