BBC (4 January 2021)

New border controls between the UK and the EU faced their first real test today, but traffic was slow following the New Year break.

A post-Brexit trade agreement signed last month means there are no tariffs on goods sent across the English Channel to France.

But new regulatory and customs checks do apply.

More than      (£45m; $61m) have been spent on preparing the French side of the Channel for this moment.
