Chinas investment deal with the European Union could pave the way for Beijings dual circulation strategy of being self-reliant in technology while still remaining a part of the global supply chain, a professor told CNBC.

Last year, the Chinese government came out with a batch of policy terms to bolster its economy, putting them under a vague umbrella term of dual circulation. The phrase refers broadly to two circles of economic activity □ internal and external □ with greater emphasis than before on business at home.
