US Secretary of State Anthony Blinken is eagerly awaited in Brussels with allies hoping to rebuild transatlantic ties after Donald Trumps departure from the White House. EURACTIV spoke to the Chargé dAffaires of the US Mission to NATO ahead of the visit.

Blinken is paying a visit to Brussels on Tuesday and Wednesday (23-24 March) to attend a meeting of NATO foreign ministers, taking place in person for the first time since November 2019.

The meetings in Brussels are meant to underscore the Biden administrations determination to strengthen the transatlantic alliance and reinvigorate our ties with allies through NATO, the State Department said.
