The Federal Service for Military and Technical Cooperation does not rule out the possibility of delivering Russian-made unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) to Armenia, Federal Service Spokeswoman Valeria Reshetnikova told TASS on Wednesday.

As of today, we are offering a number of unmanned aerial vehicles for export, in particular, the Orion-E reconnaissance system with a long-duration flight capability. In case of corresponding requests from the Armenian side, we are ready to consider them in accordance with the established procedure, the spokeswoman said.
