ENERGY MINISTERS URGE FOR REGULATORY FRAMEWORK ON HYDROGEN

- 08.04.2021

EurActiv (8 April 2021)

European energy ministers have highlighted the need to create a stable regulatory framework for hydrogen in the European Union, capable of attracting private investors into a competitive and predictable market.

Speaking at the conference Hydrogen in Our Societies Building Bridges on Wednesday (7 April), a number of national politicians expressed the same point.

Public and private investment should ally, and governments have the responsibility to give the right signals, creating the regulatory framework and conditions for the private sector to invest with stability and predictability, said Portugals minister of environment and climate action, João Pedro Matos Fernandes.
