Iraqi News Agency (27 April 2021)

Patriarch Cardinal Louis Raphael Sacco confirmed today, Tuesday, that quiet diplomacy is the way to solve problems, not wars, while Iranian Foreign Minister Muhammad Javad Zarif pointed to the importance of Iraq's pivotal role in the region and bridging viewpoints.

The media of the Patriarchate of the Chaldeans said, in a statement received by the Iraqi News Agency (INA), that "Patriarch Cardinal Louis Raphael Sako received today Iranian Foreign Minister Muhammad Javad Zarif and his accompanying delegation at the patriarchal headquarters in Mansour."

According to the statement, Sako valued "Zarif's focus during his meetings with Iraqi officials on dialogue and diplomatic solutions," noting that "quiet diplomacy is the guarantor of solving problems, not wars that leave nothing but dead and devastation, because wars end where they began."
