Some NATO allies, including Turkey and the United States, are in an ongoing dialogue over the situation in Afghanistan, NATO Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg said Monday.

Speaking ahead of the NATO summit in Brussels, when asked about NATO's decision to end its mission in Afghanistan, Stoltenberg stated that they will continue to support Afghans and that financial aid to Afghan security forces will continue.

Stating that they are working on the training of Afghan security forces abroad, Stoltenberg added: "We are also working on how critical infrastructures, including the airport, will be sustainable. NATO plans to provide support."
