Japan's defence minister has urged European countries to link forces and speak out about China's aggression amid growing tensions in Taiwan and the South China Sea.

Nobuo Kishi told the Guardian China's military has become more powerful and is attempting to use its power to unilaterally change the status quo in the East and South China Seas. The defence minister warned that China was becoming more politically and economically powerful, causing Tokyo to have strong concerns.

Japan has strong concerns in regards to the safety and security of not only our own country and the region but for the global community, Kishi warned.
