Al Jazeera (14 March 2022)

The United States has warned China against coming to Russias aid in Ukraine, saying there will be consequences if Beijing provides support to Moscows war effort.

US National Security Adviser Jake Sullivan made Washingtons concerns clear to the director of Chinas Office of the Foreign Affairs Commission Yang Jiechi during a meeting in Rome earlier in the day, State Department spokesperson Ned Price told reporters on Monday.

We are watching very closely the extent to which the PRC [the Peoples Republic of China] or any country in the world provides support – material, economic, financial, rhetorical, otherwise – to this war of choice that President [Vladimir] Putin is waging against Ukraine, Price said.
