Riga is encouraging Western allies to train Ukrainian forces on advanced Western weapons and even send Western-made fighter planes as allies plot how to arm Kyiv for the long haul, Latvias foreign minister said Thursday.

Speaking to POLITICO, Edgars Rinkēvičs insisted Ukraines partners were warming to the idea, which would have seemed unthinkable just three months ago.

I do believe that there is momentum to do things that probably we couldnt do a month or two months ago, the minister told POLITICO.
