Astana Times (29 April 2022)

President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev has made major announcements today at an annual session of the Assembly of the People of Kazakhstan, including an initiative to hold a national referendum to vote on his proposed amendments to Kazakhstans Constitution.

The date has not been announced yet, but according to Kazakhstans laws, the referendums may take place in a period between one and three months following its formal approval by the President.

Earlier this week, Tokayevs office sent a draft law to the Constitutional Courts consideration, which contains specific proposals concerning thirty-three articles to be amended, more than a third in the countrys basic law.
