More than 200 Ukrainians living in Germany gathered Tuesday in front of the Turkish Embassy in Berlin with Ukrainian flags and banners asking the Turkish leader to help Ukrainians amid their ongoing war with Russia.

Chanting "Turkiye save Mariupol" in Turkish, protesters asked Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan to help Ukrainian soldiers and civilians trapped in the besieged port city of Mariupol.

Demonstrator Eva Yakubovska said protesters made a similar call for help in front of the Turkish Embassy in Berlin two weeks ago, noting that residents "got stuck" in Mariupol for more than two months.

"It's incredible. These people have to find water and food. Some 500 civilians are also stuck in the city," she said.
