The Iranian gas network is ready to start a gas swap from Turkmenistan and to increase gas exports to this country, Irans Minister of Petroleum Javad Owj said at a meeting with Armenian Minister of Territorial Administration and Infrastructure Gnel Sanosyan, Shana reports.

Emphasized the positive and constructive talks between the two sides, Javad Owji told Shana: Negotiations for gas swap from Turkmenistan to Armenia through Iran have started, and given the high capacity of Irans gas distribution network, we will soon achieve good results in this regard.

He said that in his talks with the Armenian side, he had emphasized Irans readiness to swap gas from Turkmenistan to this country, adding that good agreements were reached in the negotiations on increasing gas exports, petrochemical products and comprehensive development.
