Sofia Globe (2 August 2022)

At a ceremony on August 2, Bulgarian President Roumen Radev swore into office the caretaker government that he has appointed as the country heads to early parliamentary elections in two months time.

This was the latest in a sequence of events following the Kiril Petkov government, elected in December 2021, being ousted in a parliamentary vote of no confidence in June, and the process of seeking to get a new government elected by the now-dissolved 47th National Assembly having proved fruitless.
