The Prime Minister Mustafa Al-Kadhimi warned, today, Thursday, of the danger of not having a budget, while confirming his readiness to hand over power to any elected government.

Al-Kadhimi said in his speech during the opening of the cabinet session that was held today and was followed by the Iraqi News Agency (INA), "I offer my deepest condolences on the occasion of Ashura, the anniversary of the martyrdom of Imam Hussein (peace be upon him), from which we draw inspiration from the values of sacrifice, justice, and fighting injustice, and we are inspired by them. The spirit of belonging to the homeland and humanity, and the importance of building nations on the basis of justice, noting that we started with this government together by facing major economic, security, political and health challenges, and we accepted the challenge, and for nearly two and a half years we are still working to overcome all obstacles in complex circumstances.
