As more than 170 were killed in 48 hours of fighting between Baku and Yerevan, the spokesperson of Azerbaijan's foreign ministry said that a political will is needed by Armenia to establish permanent peace in the region and resolve remaining disputes

Armenia is not ready to accept delimiting borders as well as the reality following the 2020 war, which saw Azerbaijan regain large swathes of its territory in the Karabakh region, the spokesperson of Azerbaijan's Foreign Ministry said.

Speaking to Daily Sabah in an exclusive interview, Leyla Abdullayeva said: The Azerbaijani side wants peace and normalization in the region. We never wanted tensions because we regained our occupied lands and we are working to reconstruct these areas and bring back life to the territories.
