Former Pakistani Prime Minister Imran Khan has vowed to continue his fight for real freedom until his last breath as thousands of his supporters joined a long march to the capital Islamabad demanding snap elections.

His Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) party on Thursday resumed the march to Islamabad from Wazirabad city in Punjab province a week after the former prime minister was shot at in an assassination attempt.

I will reach Rawalpindi and I invite you all to come and march with us because it is a matter of the future of the country and the future of your children, he said in a video address lasting less than 20 minutes, his first since he was wounded in the gun attack in Wazirabad on November 3.
