Kazakh-European cooperation in the field of digitalization was discussed in Brussels at a roundtable on Digitalization and Connectivity: How Can EU and Kazakhstan Cooperate Better, co-organized by European Neighborhood Council and the Mission of Kazakhstan to the EU. The event was attended by senior officials from leading European institutions, experts, business, diplomats and the mass media.

«Digitalization is a powerful tool for the future of new Kazakhstan, and the digital transformation determines the competitiveness of companies, nations and even entire regions. Kazakhstan has set itself a strategic task to become one of the largest digital hubs in the continent,» said Ambassador Margulan Baimukhan, Head of Kazakhstans Mission to the EU, in his welcoming remarks. In this regard he reminded that Kazakhstan achieved considerable progress in meeting the related challenges and today, for example, occupies the high 28th place in the UN E-government Development Ranking.

«Our priorities align with the ones set by the European Union and its member states, as well as its ambitious Initiative of Digital Connectivity for Central Asia, presented last month at the Samarkand conference on connectivity for sustainable development,» the Ambassador stressed.
