The rise of alternative military partners means that the U.S. doesn't need to press New Delhi to align with it on sensitive geopolitical issues or against China or Russia.

At an annual preview of Indo-Pacific issues in Washington this month, the White House coordinator for Indo-Pacific affairs, Kurt Campbell, was very clear about what the United States wants for 2023. Our interests are to see India playing an ever larger, responsible role in almost everything that we're doing, he said.
