Russia's Transneft said on Tuesday that oil shipments from Kazakhstan to Germany via the Druzhba pipeline, exempt from Western sanctions, will begin in February, the RIA Novosti news agency reported, citing Transneft.

The company said it had agreed a contract to supply 20,000 tonnes of Kazakh oil to Germany in February.

The TASS news agency also said it had supplied 500,000 tonnes of oil to Poland via the Druzhba pipeline.
