Jiangsu, Shandong and Hebei ranked among the areas most vulnerable to rising water levels and extreme weather.

China is home to more than three-quarters of the regions most at risk from climate change, with some of the worlds most important manufacturing centres threatened by extreme weather, according to a new report.

Chinas eastern Jiangsu province ranks as the worlds most climate-vulnerable region, followed by Shandong, Hebei and Henan, according to the report released on Monday by climate risk specialists XDI.
