Al Jazeera (3 march 2023)

The annual meetings of Chinas parliament and political advisory body will see Xi Jinping installed as president for an unprecedented third term.

Thousands of delegates are making their way to Beijing from across China for the countrys annual legislative meetings, which start at the weekend and are closely watched for indications of where government policy might be headed.

The so-called Two Sessions get under way on March 4 with the annual meeting of the Chinese Peoples Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC). The National Peoples Congress (NPC) opens the following day. Proceedings are expected to continue for a couple of weeks.
