UK Secretary of State for Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Affairs James Cleverly will visit Kazakhstan on March 17-18, ahead of the early parliamentary elections which embody a final stage of rebooting the governmental institutions of our country. What shall we expect from James Cleverly's visit, and what is the level of the Kazakh-British interaction today, is in the latest article from Kazinform.

High level of trust and close political dialogue

This is the first visit of James Cleverly to Kazakhstan and Central Asia. By the way, British foreign ministers have not visited our country for almost two decades. The last time Jack Straw visited Astana was in 2004.

James Cleverly will be received by President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev and Prime Minister Alikhan Smailov. He will also meet with the leadership of the Kazakh Ministry of Foreign Affairs. A square named in honor of late British Queen Elizabeth II is set to be unveiled in one of Astana's parks during his visit.
