Pillar II of AUKUS relates to the sharing of advanced technologies and there are good reasons for Wellington to seek access to that part pf the pact.

New Zealands ruling Labour government has floated the idea of seeking access to the AUKUS trilateral security pact – specifically Pillar II, in order to share (in New Zealands case, largely to receive) advanced technologies, including artificial intelligence (AI), quantum computing, cyber, undersea capabilities, hypersonic weaponry, information-sharing and electronic warfare.
