There could be an outbreak of even bigger Balkans conflict, warns Ambassador Aleksandar Bocan-Kharchenko.

The recent tension in Kosovo is dangerous and it could lead to renewed bloodshed, Russias ambassador to Serbia warned Saturday.

"This situation is dangerous, because there could be an outbreak of an even bigger conflict, and renewed bloodshed in northern Kosovo, and that could lead to the spread of tensions to the entire Balkans, or at least to one part of the Balkan region," Aleksandar Bocan-Kharchenko told Russian state outlet RT Balkan.
